Green Gentrification

Urban sustainability and the struggle for environmental justice

Kenneth A. Gould, City University of New York, USA and Tammy L. Lewis, City University of New York, USA

Series: Routledge Equity, Justice and the Sustainable City series

This book looks at the social consequences of urban "greening" from an environmental justice and sustainable development perspective. Through a comparative examination of five cases of urban greening in Brooklyn, New York, it demonstrates that such initiatives, while positive for the environment, tend to increase inequality and thus undermine the social pillar of sustainable development. Although greening is ostensibly intended to improve environmental conditions in neighborhoods, it generates green gentrification that pushes out the working-class, and people of color, and attracts white, wealthier in-migrants.
