URBAN & ENVIRONMENTAL POLICY (UEP) 301
URBAN POLICY AND POLITICS

What This Course is About

This is a seminar/discussion course about America's urban crisis -- and what we can do about it. It is also a course in policy analysis -- evaluating different public policies in terms of their effectiveness. It is also a course in American politics -- examining how political conflicts over ideas and interests influences policy regarding cities.

Following the civil disorder in Los Angeles in 1992, many politicians, candidates, journalists, business leaders, and philanthropists expressed growing concern about the "urban crisis." They held hearings, issued reports, wrote articles, and funded research about what caused it and what to do about it. Are other cities, like L.A., ticking time bombs, waiting to explode? Are the problems facing American cities -- poverty, homelessness, high levels of infant mortality, pollution, etc. -- solvable?

There's been a great deal of research and writing about urban problems in the past few years. Most of the readings for this course draw on up-to-date research and thinking. But many of the urban problems we face today have been around for some time. People have been thinking about urban problems for many years. We can learn a great deal from the urban thinkers of the past as well.

The major questions addressed in this seminar include the following:

1. As the U.S. has changed, so has the shape, function, and number of cities and metropolitan areas. How have these changes come about? How and why did the suburbs grow, especially after World War 2? What's the difference between cities and suburbs? Are they growing more alike or more apart? How has the physical shape of metropolitan areas -- its architecture, roads, residential areas, open spaces, factories, stores, offices, neighborhoods, downtowns -- changed? What impact have these changes had on how people live their lives?
2. Are there certain "urban" characteristics -- economic, social, political, psychological -- common to all cities and metropolitan areas? What is meant by the term "urban crisis?" Does it affect all urban areas in the same way? How has the distribution of wealth and power in the larger society influenced the economic, social, and physical conditions of cities and metro areas? What are the causes of urban poverty and racial segregation?
3. Should there be a national urban policy designed to help rebuild cities? Or should there simply be policies to help individuals wherever they happen to live? What approaches have been tried? What works? What has failed? Why? How do we assess proposals to deal with our urban problems? We'll look at such issues as poverty and employment, housing and homelessness, public health, transportation and environment, racial segregation and discrimination, and others. What are the current policy debates regarding these and other issues?

4. What role do cities play in our national political life? (This is often called "the politics of urban policy"). How are cities governed? (This is often called "urban politics"). Who runs our cities? Business? Local politicians? Neighborhood groups? Developers? Unions? No one? What are the different ways that cities and metro areas are governed? What difference does it make?

5. Do cities in other countries have the same problems? Why or why not? Even if we find some common characteristics, we also know that L.A. has a quality about it that differs from Boston; that Paris is hardly the same as Nairobi; that Beijing is quite different from Mexico City; that San Diego is very different from San Francisco. How do we account for these differences? What can we learn from these differences to help address the problems facing American cities?

Course Requirements

Your grade will be based on the following:

1. One-third your grade will be based on your class participation. This is a seminar course. Its success depends on class discussions. Students are expected to do the readings on time and participate in class discussions. When doing the reading, think about the issues you want to discuss in class. Most of the readings are short articles from newspapers and magazines with little or no technical jargon. Some readings are more difficult and will take more time to digest. I encourage students to debate and disagree -- but to do so based on information and evidence as well as your own values.

2. One-third of your grade will be based on written assignments. You will be assigned a number of short (3 to 4 page) papers, based primarily on the readings. These include book reviews, policy analyses, newspaper editorials, and others. All papers should be typed, double-spaced. Proofread your papers. Check for correct spelling, punctuation, grammar. Put your names on the first page. Cite your sources in the essay (Author: Page Number) and in the bibliography (Author, Title, Publisher, Date). Examples or statistics should be used to illustrate your major points, not as a substitute for critical analysis. A few assignments will require you to work in groups.

3. One-third of your grade will be based on either (a) a policy memo or (b) community engagement. You can decide which of these options you wish to choose:

Policy Memo: Students electing this option should pick an issue facing America's cities and write a policy memo to a candidate running for mayor, governor, Congress, or President. The memo should address (a) the key trends and problems, (b) two proposed policy solutions, making sure you identify which solutions are appropriate for the city, county, state, or federal government (depending on who is getting the memo) to address, (c) the political obstacles to getting these policies approved. The memo should be 10 pages long. It should not read like an academic term paper. Each section should have its major items written as short bullet points. Unlike a typical policy memo, however, you should have a bibliography page at the end. We will discuss the logistics of doing this paper in class. Each student should give me a short memo on Tuesday, Feb..

22. identifying the issue you've selected and why you have done so. Each student should give me an outline of your policy memo, along with an annotated bibliography, on Tuesday, March 22. The final paper is due on Thursday, April 28. You should use the websites listed below, as well as other sources, in doing the research for this assignment.

Community Engagement: Students who select this option are required to spend at least 25 hours during the semester volunteering for one of the LA mayoral campaigns or the inclusionary zoning campaign. If you select this option, you need to tell me, in writing, by Thursday, February 3, which activity you will be doing and the name and phone number of a contact person at the organization. It is your responsibility to contact these campaigns and arrange to volunteer. You should keep a journal of your experiences and, in order to get credit, hand in the journal and a 10-page paper describing the key elements of the campaign, explaining what you did, and examining what you learned about urban policy and politics from this experience. The two non-profit community groups leading the inclusionary zoning campaign are ACORN and the Southern CA Assn. for Nonprofit Housing (SCANPH). At ACORN, contact Peter Kuhns at (213) 727-4211 and at: At SCANPH, contact Lisa Payne at (213) 480-1249 ext 235 or at: The five major candidates for mayor, and their websites, are the following: Robert Hertzberg: Richard Alarcon: Bernard Parks: Antonio Villaraigosa: and James Hahn:

Required Readings

Books to Purchase

You should purchase the following paperback books, available at the college bookstore:

- _____ o Kozol, Savage Inequalities
- _____ o Dreier, Mollenkopf & Swanstrom, Place Matters: Metropolitcs for the 21st Century (2nd edition)
- _____ o Nivola, Laws of the Landscape
- _____ o Massey & Denton, American Apartheid: Segregation & the Making of the Underclass
- _____ o Jackson, Crabgrass Frontier: The Suburbanization of the United States
- _____ o Krumholz & Clavel, Reinventing Cities: Equity Planners Tell Their Stories
- _____ o CQ Researcher, Urban Issues (2nd edition)

Web Readings

Most of the readings for this source will be found on the website for UEP 301. You can get there by going to the Oxy library website. The course readings to be found on the website are marked with an asterisk (*). It is each student's responsibility to get these readings from the website. Please download them so you can mark them up as well as bring them to class. There are many separate articles from magazines, newspapers, journals and other sources, so it may take time to download them each week. Make sure you have sufficient time to do this.

Reports and Journals

I will distribute free copies of several reports that are part of the required reading. These include reports on sprawl in Los Angeles (Sprawl Hits the Wall), and on the income divide in Los Angeles (A Tale of Two Cities), and on community development corporations (Corrective Capitalism).

Films

We probably won't have time to see more than one film this seminar. I would encourage you, however, to go to the Library and view some or all of the following films that are relevant to the topics in the course. I am showing some of these films in my Politics 208 course on Monday nights at 7 pm in Johnson 200 on the dates listed below. You are welcome and encouraged to attend :

"Hull House: The House that Jane Built" (documentary about the first wave of urban social reform at the turn of the 20th century) -- Feb. 28

"The Times of Harvey Milk" (documentary about the rise of gay politics in San Francisco) -- April 18

"Bread and Roses" (feature film about the "justice for janitors" campaign in LA) - April 25

"The Killing Floor" (feature film about the 1919 Chicago race riots)

"City of Hope" (a feature film, directed by John Sayles, about urban politics)

"Do The Right Thing" (Spike Lee's film about the Brooklyn ghetto)

"Holding Ground" (a documentary about community organizing in Boston)

"Taken for a Ride" (a documentary about America's love affair with the automobile)

"Home Economics" (a documentary about daily life in the LA suburbs)

_____ "Is Wal-Mart Good for America?" (A documentary about the impact of the world's largest corporation on our communities)

Web Sites

I hope that all of you will become familiar with the World Wide Web as a way of connecting to the larger worlds of public policy. There are thousands of web sites that deal with social issues and thousands of advocacy organizations and political networks that have their own web sites. Here are several key sites with which you should be familiar. I encourage you to bookmark them so you can find them easily.

1. Moving Ideas Network () -- This site is a link with dozens of organizations and publications that deal with public policy issues. It includes organizations such as the Center on Budget and Policy Priorities, Economic Policy Institute, Public/Private Ventures, The American Prospect magazine, Center for Law and Social Policy, and others. It includes links to issues such as economics and politics, welfare and families, education, civic participation, and health policy.

2. Brookings Institution Metropolitan Policy Program (the Urban Institute (and the Center for Budget and Policy Priorities (are three outstanding research and policy centers focusing on urban issues. These websites are constantly being updated with new reports on a diversity of issues -- housing, transportation, welfare, banking, segregation, poverty, and other topics.

3. Community Organizing and Development () -- This site is a link with hundreds of groups involved in urban community development. If you want to find out what groups are working on different urban issues, this is the site. It also has many articles and reports on urban community development and community organizing.

4. The Center for Neighborhood Technology (<http://www.cnt.org>), the National Housing Institute (Planners Network (), Civic Practices Network (), and Citistates () all focus on innovative research and programs that strengthen urban neighborhoods and metropolitan areas. Each site has links to many other resources about particular issues, programs, cities, and metropolitan areas. Two magazines – Shelterforce (and City Limits (– provide examples of interesting urban politics and policy from a liberal/progressive perspective. City Journal (published by the Manhattan Institute, provides interesting articles on urban issues from a conservative perspective.

5. The U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development has its own web site (<http://www.hud.gov>) with information about its programs, policies, data bases, and many links. More useful for this course is HUD's Office of Policy Development & Research (which has a great deal of information about housing and urban problems, studies and publications, and available data. You reach can the HUD library, with many reports and publications about cities and housing problems, at this site.

Newspapers, Magazines and Journals

Students are expected to read at least one daily newspaper -- the LA Times, the New York Times, or the Wall Street Journal -- on a regular basis. When an article appears in one of these papers that relates to the topics in the course, bring it up in class. There are also many magazines -- such as The Neighborhood Works, Governing, and Planning -- targeted to urban practitioners and policymakers. The best sources for following national politics are Washington Post Weekly and National Journal. You should also become familiar with the major journals that focus on urban problems and policies. In the Library, peruse these publications to see what scholars and practitioners are saying. The major journals include Urban Affairs Quarterly, Journal of the American Planning Association, Journal of Urban Affairs, and National Civic Review. Other relevant journals include Social Work, Social Policy, Challenge, and American Demographics.
