What This Course is About
"Organizing," writes author Si Kahn, "is people working together to get things done." This course focuses primarily on community organizing efforts by people working together to improve their neighborhoods and cities. Community organizing can focus on a wide variety of issues—housing, the environment, public safety, public health and health care, child care, jobs, poverty, discrimination, and many others. We will also focus on union organizing as a compliment to community organizing.

The purpose of the course is to help prepare you to be effective leaders. Some of you may want to become professional organizers, but all of you are citizens in some community. If you want to be an effective, active citizen who can make a difference in your community, you will need to use the tools of leadership and organization-building.

The course examines the history of community organizing in the United States. It explores the different theories and approaches to effective grassroots organizing. It emphasizes the skills and techniques used to empower people so they can win victories and improve their communities.

Course Requirements
The course is intended to be a small, participatory seminar. Active student participation is critical to its success. The course involves five ways of learning:

1. We will read several books and a number of articles about organizing, including several case studies, and discuss them in class.

2. We will watch several films (including documentaries) and discuss them in class.

3. We will talk with several guest speakers who have experience as effective organizers.

4. We will participate in several hands-on exercises.

5. You will spend at least 12 hours a week working with a community organization in the L.A. area. You should already have picked one of these groups to work with during the entire term. You will attend meetings and public events, work in the office, meet the staff and members, and undertake research that will help the organization achieve its goals.
Grades
Your grade will be based on four things:

1. Your participation in class. Students are expected to do the reading on time, participate in class discussions and exercises, and complete writing assignments on time.

2. Your participation in a community organization internship. Students are expected to be responsible volunteers and complete the tasks assigned to you. Each student should keep a journal about their internship experiences. The journal will be handed in at the end of the term. To evaluate your internship, I will discuss your work with the supervisor and with you.

3. A short paper (15 pages) describing and analyzing your internship and the organization you worked with. The paper should draw on the class materials (readings, films, speakers, exercises) as well as your experiences and your journal. The paper should explain what you learned about community organizing especially, and how well the organization met the criteria of effective organizing. Some guidelines for your journal and final paper are attached at the end. A draft of this paper is due Thursday, November 18. The final version is due on Tuesday, December 7. I won't accept any late papers.

4. A class project. The entire class will select an on-campus organizing project, develop a strategy, and carry it out.

Required Readings

Much of the course reading will be found in the books listed below. In addition, all readings with an asterisk (*) will be found on the website for this course. Go to the Oxy library webpage, go to the electronic reserves, and find the website for UEP 310.

Students should also regularly bring to class articles from newspapers or magazines that relate to the topics discussed in the course.

You should purchase the following paperback books from the Bookstore:
Si Kahn, Organizing: A Guide for Grassroots Leaders
Mary Beth Rogers, Cold Anger: A Story of Faith and Power Politics
David Reynolds, Taking the High Road: Communities Organize for Economic Change

Recommended Readings

The following paperback books are recommended for basic reference:

Robert Fisher, Let the People Decide: Neighborhood Organizing in America (2nd edition)
This is the best overview of the history of community organizing. It describes various efforts and strategies to organize communities and neighborhoods in this century.

Saul Alinsky, Rules for Radicals and Reveille for Radicals
Alinsky was the "father" of community organizing, starting in the 1940s. These two books are the "bibles" of organizing -- the lessons he learned from his decades as an organizer. They are both in paperback, easy to read, and full of great insights, most of which have stood the test of time. Gregory Pierce, Activism That Makes Sense: Congregations and Community Organization This book discusses the relationship between religious commitment and social activism and describes the role of religious faith in community organizing.

Charlotte Ryan, Prime Time Activism This book is a handbook for grassroots activists about dealing with the media.

Mark Warren, Dry Bones Rattling This is a case study of effective community organizing around a variety of issues in Texas. It is also an analysis of how community organizing relates to the persistent crisis of American democracy -- inequalities of power, participation, and policymaking.

Lunchtime Discussions In addition to speakers I've invited to our seminar, several prominent activists, policymakers, and thinkers will be speaking on campus for lunchtime discussions with the class. These are listed on the syllabus.

Web Sites I hope that all of you will become familiar with the World Wide Web as a way to connect to the larger worlds of public policy, advocacy, and organizing. There are thousands of web sites that deal with social issues and thousands of advocacy organizations and political networks that have their own web sites. Here are several key sites with which you should be familiar. I encourage you to bookmark them so you can find them easily.

1. Policy Action Network (http://movingideas.org) and Campaign for America’s Future (http://www.ourfuture.org) -- These sites link with dozens of organizations and publications that deal with public policy issues. They includes organizations such as the Center for Budget and Policy Priorities, Economic Policy Institute, Public/Private Ventures, The American Prospect magazine, Center for Law and Social Policy, and others. They include links to issues such as economics and politics, welfare and families, education, civic participation, and health policy.

2. Community Organizing and Development (http://comm-org.utoledo.edu) -- This site is a link with hundreds of groups involved in urban community development. If you want to find out what groups are working on different urban issues, this is the site. It also has many articles and reports on urban community development and community organizing.

3. The Center for Neighborhood Technology (http://www.cnt.org), the National Housing Institute (www.nhi.org), the Metropolitan Initiative (http://www.cnt.org/mi/index.html), Planners Network (http://www.plannernetwork.org), Civic Practices Network (http://www.cpn.org), and Citistates (http://www.citistates.com), and Livable Places (http://www.livableplaces.org) all focus on innovative research and programs that strengthen urban neighborhoods and metropolitan areas. Each site has links to many other resources about particular issues, programs, cities, and metropolitan areas.
4. The U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development has its own web site with information about its programs, policies, data bases, and many links. HUD's Office of Policy Development & Research (http://www.huduser.org) has its own site with a great deal of information about housing and urban problems, studies and publications, and available data. You reach can the HUD library, with many reports and publications about cities and housing problems, at this site.

5. United Students Against Sweatshops (http://www.usasnet.org), Sweatshop Watch (www.sweatshopwatch.org), Global Exchange (http://www.globalexchange.org); and National Labor Committee (www.nlcn.org) -- these are three of the leading organizations working to raise awareness about and eliminate sweatshops in the U.S. and overseas.

6. American Prospect (http://www.prospect.org), The Nation (http://www.thenation.com). These are two of the most important magazines analyzing American politics from a progressive, grassroots perspective

Demos - A Network for Ideas and Action (http://www.demos-usa.org/demos); Center for Responsive Politics (http://www.opensecrets.org); Public Campaign (http://www.publiccampaign.org); Good Jobs First (http://www.goodjobsfirst.org); Center on Budget and Policy Priorities (http://www.cbpp.org); California Budget Project (http://www.cbp.org); Institute for the Study of Homelessness and Poverty in Los Angeles http://www.weingart.org/institute); Tom Paine: Common Sense (http://www.tompaine.com) -- These think tanks all provide interesting policy ideas on such issues as tax policy, campaign finance, anti-poverty policy, economic development, citizen participation, housing and homelessness, voting rights, and others

Moveon.Org: Democracy in Action (http://www.moveon.org); Jobs with Justice (http://www.jwj.org); AFL-CIO (http://www.aflcio.org); Union Summer (http://www.aflcio.org/unionsummer); Center for Community Change (http://www.communitychange.org); California Peace Action (http://www.californiapaceaction.org); ACORN - Association of Community Organizations for Reform Now (http://www.acorn.org); Industrial Areas Foundation (http://www.tresser.com/IAF.htm); Los Angeles Alliance for a New Economy (LAANE) (http://www.laanne.org); Los Angeles County Federation of Labor (http://www.launionaflcio.org); Community Coalition (http://www.ccsapt.org); Communities for a Better Environment (http://www.cbecal.org) Strategic Action for a Just Economy (SAJE) (http://www.saje.net); Southern California Assn. for Non-Profit Housing (SCANPH) (http://www.scanph.org); Liberty Hill Foundation (http://www.libertyhill.org) -- These websites from various activist organizations reflect much of the best organizing taking place around the U.S. and in L.A.
READINGS, FILMS, SPEAKERS, AND DISCUSSION TOPICS

The course will cover the following topics. Students should have reading assignments completed before the class discussion on the topic. Readings with an asterisk will found on the course website.

Problems and Issues

How do you learn about your community and neighborhood? How do you identify what the "problems" are? What's the difference between a "problem" and an "issue?" How do you decide what issues to work on? What are "winnable" issues?

Building Organizations, Developing Leaders, Getting People Involved
Organizing requires participation. Participation depends on motivating people to take the responsibility to act -- the "iron law" of organizing. Since people have a lot of other things to do in their lives, How do effective organizers and leaders build organizations by getting people to actively participate? How do they avoid the "free rider" problem? (If I can benefit from what an organization does without having to participate, why should I participate?) How do they find out what motivates people? What's the difference between organizing and manipulation? What is the difference between direct action organizing, social work, advocacy, and community development as approaches to solving community problems? What are the skills and roles of a good organizer? What's the difference between an organizer and a leader? How do you find people to participate in community organizations and actions? How do you help people to become effective, self-confident leaders? How do you divide up responsibilities to maximize people's involvement and skills? How do you keep morale up and enthusiasm among members? How do you keep an organization together that becomes the vehicle for grassroots "empowerment?"

Taking Action: Campaigns, Strategies, and Tactics

How do you pick the most effective way to mobilize people around issues? How do you design winning issue-oriented campaigns around government policy and corporate conduct? When do you use "direct action," such as confrontation and civil disobedience? How do you lobby effectively? How do you organize an effective rally or demonstration? How do you organize a successful public hearing? How do you run a successful meeting? How do you negotiate with people in power? What's the difference between winning and losing, or between a "cop out" and a "compromise?"

Action Research, Intelligence Gathering, and Communication
How do grassroots organizations use information to help them win victories? How and where do they get that information? What's the difference between "research" and "intelligence gathering?" How do you do research about an issue? How do you do research about the political, economic, and civic "power structure?" How do you interview people? How do grassroots organizations communicate their message? What are the different audiences for their message? How do they get the mass media to pay attention?

Journal/Final Paper

As part of this course, you should keep a journal. Your journal should record your internship activities. You should take notes on your observations and impressions about the people, the organization, the community, and issues you are dealing with. You should record your own activities -- including the highlights and problems.

Each student in this course is required to write a short paper (15 pages) describing and analyzing your internship and the organization you worked with. The paper should draw on the class materials (readings, films, speakers, exercises) as well as your experiences and your journal. The paper should explain what you learned about community organizing especially, what are the key elements of effective community organizing and how well the organization met these criteria.

Your final paper should aim to be objective. That means you should view the organization from a variety of angles and perspectives -- not simply the perspective of your supervisor. You should look at the organization from the perspective of the staff, the board, constituents, allies, targets, and others. Then you can come to your own conclusion based on having an "outsider's" view of the organization. In order to write this paper, in other words, you will need to talk to people besides your intern supervisor. Your analysis of the organization's strengths and weaknesses should be based on the criteria we have discussed and read about in class. To help you think about these issues, I will put on the course website a chapter called "Getting to Know the Placement Site" from the book The Successful Internship: Transformation and Empowerment in Experiential Learning by H. Frederick Sweitzer and Mary A. King (second edition, Thompson-Brooks/Cole Publishers, 2004). Please read this chapter within the first two weeks of your internship.

The final paper should include an evaluation of the organization and of your internship. Topics should include (but aren't limited to) the following:

- The history of the organization. How it was started and by whom? Why was it started? How and why it has changed since its beginning? What are the organization's missions and goals?
- How is the organization organized? Discuss its budget, staff, board, and sources of funds. Who runs the organization? How does the way it is organized reflected its missions and goals? How does the way it is funded influence what it does?
- How does the organization decide what issues to get involved with? What is the group's overall strategy? How does it decide on strategy and tactics?
- What is the organization's constituency? How does it determine what its constituency is?
- How does the organization deals with such matters as leadership, recruiting and maintaining members, maintaining morale, fundraising, research, and the media?

- What impact does involvement in the organization have on the people -- staff, leaders, members?

- Discuss how your internship fit into the organization's overall activities. Discuss the specific role(s) you played in the organization. Evaluate the pros and cons of your internship.

- Discuss the overall strengths and weaknesses of the organization. Be sure to clarify what criteria you are using.
